States Further That it Will Not Sell-Not Rushing After Southern

It can be authoratatively stated, on the word of President Newgass, of the Atlantic and Danville railroad, that that road has not sold out to the Southern, and he further stated yesterday, in conversation with a Virginian-Pilot representative, to whom he gave authority for the statement, that the road has no such intention as selling out at

Mr. Newgass laughted at the idea of selling and stated that the road would go on in the course it has mapped out, quietly and steadily improving and growing, as the demands call for growth, and the people along the line of its proposed extensions show their willingness to meet the road in a spirit of fairness. He said, further, that at present all the extension which would be built was the twelve or fourteen miles from Virgillina to the North Carolina copper mines, with the intention growing, as the demands call for ern, he stated, were friendly, and a system of recliprocity in freights was in operation, which would not be disturbed. The Atlantic and Danville was doing a big business and winning the confidence of the people, as to utilimate intents for Southern connections.

NAVAL RESERVES MEET.

The special committee on Holt Street Bridge reported, presenting a letter from City Engineer Brooke, recommending the driving of intermediate piling bents and the widening of the bridge by six feet walk-ways on each of the wideling of the cupied the time of the circle-ways on each meeting decided to postpone the election of a commander of the battalion tion of a commander of the battalion to a called meeting later on.

While the officers of the divisions claim that there is no hitch in the matter, it is evident that, unless the battalion goes out of its present efficial list for a commander, heart burnings will ensue, and for this reason the outlined scheme given by the Virginian-Pilot lately is the best, or so considered, that has been presented. This, it will be remembered, was the selection of some gentleman of naval knowledge, experience, of position, influence and tact to push the interests of the reserves here and eisewhere, for commander.

There is another element to be considered in this matter also, which is the desire of the men to elect their own commander, and this presents an idea of practicality hard to down.

Just what will be the outcome remains to be seen. The results of the next meeting will be anxiously looked forward to by the friends of the Naval Reserves.

Habeas Corpus For Release of Horatio E. Solomon.

is Entitled to Release, Having Habeas corpus proceedings were begun before Judge Hanckel in the Cor-poration Court yesterday to procure the release of Horatio E. Solomon, colored, who, on the 19th of last January, shot and killed Charles Small, also colored, in a house on James street. The proceedings were instituted Mr. George Melntosh, counsel for is being illegally held in jail, because two grand juries have men and adjourned without indicting him.

CAUSED BY QUARANTINE.

It seems that the primary cause of Solomon's long incarceration in jail without a preliminary hearing was caused from the fact that he was confined in a portion of the jall under the naed in a portion of the jail under the old quarrantine.

It will be remembered that he was not given a hearing before Justice Teminia until April 18th, or nearly two months after he had been arrested.

Mr. Mcintosh, in his argument, did not charge neglect on the part of anyone, though he contended that it would not have been necessary for the grand jury to have had the prisoner before it in order to have indicted him.

WILL HAVE TO W. WILL HAVE TO WAIT LONGER.

WILL HAVE TO WAIT LONGER.

As there is no grand jury for May the prisoner, Mr. McIntosh said, would have to wait in jail another month or two before an indictment was secured against him, and he could be given a trial.

Commonwealth's Attorney Duncan argued that the jurisdiction of the Corporation Court did not begin in Solomon's case until after he had been committed on the preliminary hearing before Justice Tomlin on April 18th. Since that time, he contended that he had had no opportunity to present an indictment in the case. He said that the indictment would have been presented had the case come to him regularly in time, but that he was powerless to act without witnesses, On the other hand, Mr. McIntosh held that the witnesses who appeared against Solomon in the preliminary hearing were the Commonwealth's witnesses all the time.

Judge Hanckel reserved his decision.

ASKS FOR THEIR RELEASE.

ASKS FOR THEIR RELEASE.

When the cases of Elnora Riddick and Mary Purvis were called in the Corporation Court, their counsel, P. J. Morris, made a motion that the prisoners be dismissed from custody. The motion was besed on statutory grounds. These defendants, both of whom are colored, were indicted on December 6, 1898, for grand larceny. Four terms of the Corporation Court having been held since that time, and no trial having been accorded the defendants, their counsel contended that, under section 4,947 of the Code of Virginia, they were entitled to be released from prosecution.

The motion will be decided by Judge Hanckel to-day.
